

Gods Child Andrew

The only writing more difficult and dangerous than describing the life and death of a blessed child, with its glory and grief, is writing when the child is ones own. The pain and risks of such writing are obvious. Gods grace alone allows, and even demands, that they be accepted, suffered and shared. Sandy and Fr Duane have accomplished this writing in the most gracious way. They tell Andrews story, and their own, with awesome simplicity and disarming directness. The result is Christian martyria and homologia in their purest form: a witness and confession which must be made, whatever the cost. For the love of Christ constrains us. (2 Corinthians 5:14) Fr Thomas Hopko, from the Foreword
