

Abstract of the Census of Massachusetts, 1865: With Remarks on the Same, and Supplementary Tables (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Abstract of the Census of Massachusetts, 1865: With Remarks on the Same, and Supplementary Tables The present document has been prepared for publication in accordance with the requirements of Chapter 69 of the Acts of 1865. It contains full Abstracts of the principal facts ascertained by the Census taken under authority of the Act of March 6, 1865, and relating to the population existing on the first day of May, 1865. The original returns of this Census were by law required to be made on or before the last day of August of 1865, and a Resolve of May 13, 1865, had authorized the printing of the Census Abstract. Owing to the fact, however, that no appropriation was made by the legislature until March 15, 1866, for defraying the necessary expenses attending the preparation and publication of the Abstract, the work could not be entered upon until early in the summer of 1866. Since its commencement it has been prosecuted with commendable diligence, of which the result appears in the present volume. iv preface. The abstracts constituting Tables I., II., III. And IV. Of the present Report, comprise the details and particulars properly belonging to the Census of 1865. The volume of Industrial Statistics compiled by the Secretary from the returns of May 1, 1865, presents a large amount of interesting information - additional to that of the Census Returns from which Table IV. Is compiled - in regard to the numbers pursuing leading occupations in the several cities and towns. In the belief that a condensed statement of these facts will be of permanent value as well as of present interest, the Supplementary Table, V., (of Occupations,) has been compiled for this volume, and will be found to contain a large amount of valuable statistical matter, comprised within the limits of a few pages. The date of the present Census being precisely one hundred years from the time of taking the first regular Census of Massachusetts in 1765, it has been deemed eminently proper and desirable to collect and present at one view, in the present Abstract, full details of the results obtained by that and all subsequent Censuses of the Commonwealth, up to the present time; notwithstanding the fact that considerable portions of the same have already appeared in print. Tables VII, XII. And XIII, accordingly, contain. Abstracts of all the Censuses heretofore taken, arranged by counties and towns, in a manner to facilitate comparison and research.
