

THE PORTRAIT OF A LADY - HENRY JAMES (WITH NOTES)(BIOGRAPHY)(ILLUSTRATED)

The Portrait of a Lady is a novel by Henry James, first published as a serial in The Atlantic Monthly and Macmillans Magazine in 1880/81 and then as a book in 1881. It is one of James's most popular long novels, and is regarded by critics as one of his finest. The Portrait of a Lady is the story of a spirited young American woman, Isabel Archer, who in affronting her destiny, finds it overwhelming. She inherits a large amount of money and subsequently becomes the victim of Machiavellian scheming by two American expatriates. Like many of James's novels, it is set in Europe, mostly England and Italy. Generally regarded as the masterpiece of James's early period, this novel reflects James's continuing interest in the differences between the New World and the Old, often to the detriment of the former. It also treats in a profound way the themes of personal freedom, responsibility, and betrayal. Henry James was an American writer who spent most of his writing career in Britain. He is regarded as one of the key figures of 19th-century literary realism.

Twain was also a staunch supporter of women's rights and an active abolitionist. John James Audubon was an American ornithologist, naturalist, and painter. He was notable for his lifelike illustrations of birds. Another 1887 biographer has stated that his mother was a lady from a prominent family. Audubon set about to study American birds, determined to illustrate his own work. The biography of John James Audubon, edited by his wife and derived primarily from his notes, was published in 1887. Dryden was born 9 August 1631 into an extended family of rising Puritan gentry in London. In the opening stanzas of the poem, Dryden uses the metaphor of treason to refer to his best notes: he . . . to have lived with and written prefaces for the bookseller Henry Herringman, and Dryden mythologizes Charles II, his brother James, Duke of York, and the . . .
